Ko Chang Islands

Trat is the easternmost border province of Thailand. Its coastal location, in the Gulf of Thailand, is about 315 km. from Bangkok. Mu Ko Chang Marine National Park, which consists of up to 52 islands, is a popular destination among foreign tourists. The park is full of abundant natural attractions, coastlines and coral reefs, representative of eastern Thailand. It is said to be the "Coastal Jewel of the East". Ko Chang is the second largest island in Thailand after Phuket. Mu Ko Chang Marine National Park is therefore a valuable resource for tourism in terms of both nature and local culture, as well as being a tranquil location for a holiday. Ko Chang is currently being developed by the government as an ecotourism destination, with a variety of accommodation available to suit the pockets of all visitors.

A sides from the Marine National Park, Trat province borders the neighbouring country of Cambodia. Visitors travelling from Cambodia may pass through immigration into Trat at Baan Haad Lek and travel directly by sea to Mu Ko Chang Marine National Park. Round-trip minibuses (vans) between Baan Haad Lek and Trat operate daily from 06:00 to 18:00. The fare is 100 Baht/head.

Dive Sites

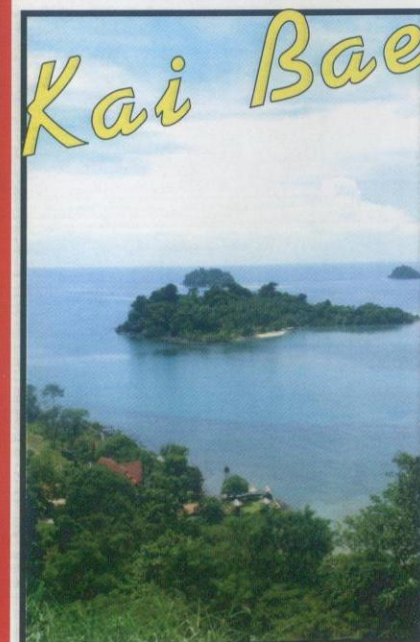

In order to appreciate the beautiful coral reefs and fishes, visitors should visit the best dive sites, which are located to the south of Ko Chang. Lovely reefs and beaches can be found in Mu Ko Rang, which consists of several large and smaller islands such as Ko Wai, Ko Kham, Ko Yak, Ko Thong Lang, Ko Tien, Ko Mak, etc.

Time to Go

The best time to visit Mu Ko Chang Marine National Park is between October to May, the winter and summer seasons, since the condition of the sea is suitable for making the trip. However, Ko Chang itself can be visited year-round. It takes about 45 minutes to reach from the mainland. During the rainy season, you can come to Ko Chang and experience the fragrance of luscious forests, a rarely experienced natural charm.

Ko Kood

This island is the furthest south in the seas of Trat. It is the fourth largest island in Thailand and the second largest in Trat province, after Ko Chang. It is about 25 km. long and 12 km. wide, giving a total area of about 105 km². Ko Kood has numerous natural features and an abundant variety of flora. The island is now a sub-district. There are many attractions to be found on the island including beaches, beautiful clear seas, waterfalls, mangrove forests, and lovely coral reefs. Travel within Ko Kood itself is not as convenient as on Ko Chang. In the future, it is hoped that this island will be an interesting site for tourists since it is far away from the mainland making it suitable for a peaceful vacation.

KO KOOD

Ko Mak

Ko Mak is another medium-sized island and is located between Ko Chang and Ko Kood. It consists of several small islets and nearby islands. 80% of the island is flat and planted with coconut trees. Accommodation has been built harmoniously with nature. A local community, school and temple retain the original characteristics of the local population. The location of Ko Mak makes the island a centre of fishing activities. Motorcycles are available for rent in order for visitors to experience the local, simple living style.

Ko Kra Dad

This island, in the midst of the sea, is so flat like a piece of paper. The island is named after a dominant species of plant that grows here. An interesting fact is that there are many deer living on the island. It is only island in Thailand that has a legal land title deed. There is only one resort on the island.

Ko Wai

This small island is located to the south of Ko Chang. It is quite suitable for a quiet vacation. The island is not yet over-developed so it retains its natural environment of beautiful beaches and coral reefs. It is popular with foreign visitors. Three cottage-style resorts, appropriate to the island's atmosphere, charge between 150-600 Baht.

Places of Interests

Ko Chang

Beaches on Ko Chang are found to the west and south of the island. Starting at the northwest the first beach is Haad Sai Khao (White Sand Beach), followed by Haad Klong Prao, Haad kai Bae, Ao Bai Laan, and the Baan Bang Bao community village. All the beaches have different types of accommodation to suit to your budget. The southeastern side of the island is different from the west. The area hosts fruit and rubber plantations, mountains and forests. To the south is Baan Salak Petch, a large original community of local island people. A favourite attraction here is the local home-stay accommodation specifically developed for visitors. The houses have been built to face the sea. Visitors interested in local living styles and a tranquil atmosphere can stay here very economically. The atmosphere is in total contrast to the eastern coast.

Travel in Ko Chang

Local buses (Songtaew) run to all the island's tourist attractions. They start at the piers and cost 30-60 Baht according to distance.
